

Ludovica Bruno and Chiara Giordano

INTERVIEWS IN BOURNEMOUTH

On 26th February we met Hanne in Primark in the afternoon. She has lived in Bournemouth for 10 years but she doesn't like this town because, according to her, there are few shops, the centre is very small and there is no vitality. She would like to change everything of this town. In her free time, she likes meeting friends and going out.

In this photo we are with Hanne in Primark

We also met Lindsay in JD store. She has lived in Bournemouth for about 25 years. She likes this town but she would like more shops in the centre. In her free time, she likes swimming, playing tennis or going to the beach.

In a sport shop we met a tall, middle-aged, nearly bald man, whose name was Paul. He had arrived in Bournemouth two hours before on a trip. He didn't have a positive opinion of this town. He told us that the town was "terrible" and he would to change a lot of things.

Strange guy! While we were interviewing him, he suddenly left...

